LOCAL ARIZONA CITY HEROES WORK FOR YOU
Local municipal heroes to join League of Arizona Cities and Towns to discuss AZ Cities @ Work on “Morning Scramble” Wednesday morning

PHOENIX, AZ (JUNE 10, 2013) – AZ Cities at Work is a collaborative effort among Arizona’s cities and towns to educate and inform our residents about the work that local governments do each and every day. Clean water, public safety, safe streets, trash collection and recycling are just some of the many vital services cities and towns in Arizona provide to our citizens 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

In an effort to bring awareness to these vital services offered in cities and towns across Arizona, local municipal heroes will join Matt Lore of the League of Arizona Cities and Towns in a segment of the “Morning Scramble” on Wednesday, June 12. The “Morning Scramble” is a weekday morning show on AZTV, hosted by Pat McMahon.

The featured guests include: Anna Marie O’Brien, a librarian of Tempe; Lisa Kutsis, a Public Information Officer from the Goodyear Police Department; and Michele Long, a Fire and Life Safety Education and Drowning Prevention Coordinator of Mesa. Their appearance will highlight distinctive programs and services offered in their respective communities.

Although cities and towns have always provided basic needs, programs such as Tempe’s “Dig into Reading,” Goodyear’s Police Teen Academy, and Mesa’s pool and life safety programs give an extended quality of life to residents and community members. They keep communities vibrant, making them a destination for both residents and tourists.

The innovative programs that will be discussed represent only a small number of the many ways local governments respond to the needs of their residents in a flexible and efficient manner. They represent just a few examples of Arizona cities and towns at work.
